The new Black Ice Software Auto-print SDK includes some exciting new features and improvements!

Black Ice Software added a new User Interface for the Auto-print C# Service sample, helping developers and System Integrators to build user-friendly Windows Service based document converters. The new user interface demonstrates how to Configure, Install and Uninstall the Windows Service, how to select the target printer, and how to configure the folders used for the document conversion.

The new Auto-print SDK comes with Unicode support for email (.msg, .eml) files, allowing users to print emails containing non-English and accented characters.

The most recent version also includes improved licensing capabilities to allow customers to test the Proxy Connection during the activation, and to display more meaningful licensing related error messages to help users activate the product.

The latest version of the Auto-print SDK comes with an updated documentation to help developers and System Integrators to utilize the Auto-print SDK.

The complete list of improvements in the latest Auto-print SDK includes the following:
